

An ongoing Diary

By Pedro Meyer
Day 24

©Pedro Meyer 2001

Interesting walking down some of the side streets towards the Javitz Convention Center where the Macworld event will be held. I went to get my passes today. I looked into this store, I never could figure out what it is exactly that they were selling. It was obvious that mannequins had something to do with their trade, but these were old and dilapidated ones.

All over the city there are these signs playing on the logo of I love New York. It actually takes one some time to figure out that the heart has been replaced by an Apple. Very clever advertising, however the irony cannot be lost when you end up having one of these signs surrounded by barbed wire.

Pedro Meyer
July 17, 2001
New York City, US.