Please, place me on your mailing list.

The motto of your website 'from analog to digital photography' well describes the evolution of my photographic interests. I am a Russian photographer who was doing large format contact prints using old wooden cameras. It was the purest analog photography. Now I've posted my pictures on the net, purchased digital equipment and starting a computer manipulated photography project. One of the inspirations for this turn was your site.

Yet I find that digital photography is a different media, not a further development of traditional photography. My eye used to see reality through the lens of a camera and chemical processes, digital photography is looking at the world through the lens of imagination. It is more about transformation than reflection. For me doing analog and digital photography is like living two different lives. Yet I love both and don't want the digital to kill the analog.
