Pedro,

I am working in the Department of Photographs as a staff assistant...doing whatever it is they (the curators) need me to do, wherever they need me to do it. I help with the organization of exhibition materials, correspondence with visitors, coordinating the study room and materials, just about anything. It's a good job in what I consider to be the best department at the Getty.

I have heard quite a bit about ZoneZero, starting with a visit to my college (Scripps) by one of the women in your organization-I can't remember her name. It was for a seminar/lecture series about women curators. I occasionally stop by the website for personal and work related info, and have found it to be very informative and quite often inspiring. I am quite interested in the photographic work coming out of South and Central America, especially when it deals with the intersection of gender, sexuality and geographic location. Does that make sense? I am also quite compelled by the growing use of digital photography, even though I choose to stick with my good old Pentax 35mm. For these reasons, your site is an asset in for both technical and purely visual information.
