

VICE Magazine has collaborated with user generated youth initiative Ctrl.Alt.Shift, to launch a unique photographic project that explores the global issues of Gender, Power and Poverty. The creative collaboration takes the form of an international competition, educating young people around the world on this major global development issue and inviting them to create photography inspired by this theme.

Competition winners will have their work featured in VICE and Ctrl.Alt.Shift magazines, displayed on CtrlAltShit.co.uk and exhibited in a London gallery– alongside work from campaign ambassador, legendary New York photo artist Nan Goldin – famous for her photographic collection The Ballad of Sexual Dependency – and a group of all-star project mentors.
