

The Digital Storytelling Festival

Written by Pedro Meyer

The Digital Storytelling Festival October 13 - 17, 1995, Crested Butte, CO

A narrative by Pedro Meyer

ESPAÑOL

Photography is story telling through visual means. I use the camera to tell stories. I now use the computer to make the camera tell ever more interesting ideas, while the internet allows for this marriage - between the computer and the camera - to deliver such stories all over the world. I arrived at Crested Butte, Colorado at night. The sky was heavy with darkness in between the thunder bolts which reminded me of a flash coming from a gigantic camera in space. The Universe was taking pictures of itself at night. I have done that sometimes myself, but never during a rain storm. I think I will try that someday.

Friday the 13th

I wake up and the day is beautiful, it's sunny. I wonder why the Universe had not wanted to take its self portrait during the day.

October 13 - 17, 1995, Crested Butte, CO

A narrative by Pedro Meyer

Photography is story telling through visual means. I use the camera to tell stories. I now use the computer to make the camera tell ever more interesting ideas, while the internet allows for this marriage - between the computer and the camera - to deliver such stories all over the world. I arrived at Crested Butte, Colorado at night. The sky was heavy with darkness in between the thunder bolts which reminded me of a flash coming from a gigantic camera in space. The Universe was taking pictures of itself at night. I have done that sometimes myself, but never during a rain storm. I think I will try that someday.

Go to exhibition